

THE BEST MOVIES TO WATCH IN SEPTEMBER 2018

POPCORN

THE MOVIE GUIDE

Written by @enikőjancsek

So autumn is on the corner again, and after a mediocre selection of movies this summer we can finally watch one wonderful movie after another. Just don't forget the popcorn, when you go check them out!

6/9: Destination Wedding

A destination wedding is a special kind of ceremony, where all the guests go to a determined place to celebrate the couple's nuptials. Well, our two main characters hate these weddings; actually they hate all kinds of weddings, and just everyone to be precise. This is probably what brings them together, and through various events maybe they might even get close to each other. The wonderful Winona Ryder and Keanu Reeves play the main roles, for the fourth time together now.

27/9: BlackKkKlansman

This film is based on the crazy true story of an African-American police officer joining the Ku Klux Klan in the 1970s. Being the first black detective at the Colorado Springs Police Department was a big achievement itself, but getting into the Klan and speaking with David Duke repeatedly, is just extraordinary. With John David Washington and Adam Driver, Spike Lee's film seems extremely promising.

14/9: A Simple Favor

The days of a mommy blogger turn upside down, when her best friend disappears from town. She tries finding her desperately, looking for clues and answers. Was her friend hiding something? Will she ever be found? Alive? You might get these questions answered if you watch the film with Anna Kendrick and Blake Lively in the title roles.

27/9: Utøya 22. juli

One can never forget the shock when hearing the news about a small island in Norway, where 77 people – mostly teenagers – were massacred. It took a long time for the scars to start healing, and perhaps they never will, but this memorial film might just be the next step in helping people deal with what has happened. Follow a young girl trying to survive the day and find her sister, in exactly 78 minutes, as the length of her original flight.

Sunset (Napszállta)

The new movie of László Nemes Jeles is about a young girl in Budapest before World War I trying to find job at a hat maker's, which was once her parent's business. Nemes Jeles won countless awards with his last movie Son of Saul (including the Oscar for Best Foreign Film), so of course one wishes to see his new movie as well! Vibes is very excited about it!
